English Archaeological Societies, has been seriously assaulted by the Sheikh of Algarbeah after an altercation with the latter concerning the supply of provisions to M. de la Martiniere's camp followers.

DISCOVERY OF THE SARCOPHAGUS OF
ALEXANDER THE GREAT
Constantinople, April 11

Further examination of the sarcophagi recently discovered at Saida, in Syria, shows that among them is the sarcophagus of Alexander the Great containing the body of the monarch.

CHINA AND THE VATICAN
Rome, April 11

The convention under negotiation for some time past between the Chinese Government and the Vatican for the direct representation of the Holy See at Peking has been concluded, and the Monsignor Agliardi has been appointed to the post of Internuncio thus rendered necessary in the Chinese capital.

Monsignor Agliardi will leave for Peking in the course of next month, representations having been made by the Chinese Government that the departure of the Internuncio should be expedited as much as possible. It is known at the Vatican that the French assumption of a protectorate over the Catholic missions in China and the native Christians depending on them has produced a feeling of strong dissatisfaction among the Chinese official class, and that apprehension is felt at Peking that unless the Internuncio arrives shortly in order to terminate the present unsatisfactory state of things serious disorders may result.

GERMANY AND ZANZIBAR
Berlin, April 11

It is announced that the German squadron will be leaving Zanzibar, where they have been maintaining arrangements of the East African Delimitation Conference.

MUMMY STRIKES AGAIN

The body of James Windibank was discovered late yesterday in the room he was preparing for the British Museum's exhibit of newly discovered artefacts from the tomb of Katebet's Mummy. The archaeologist was found strangled. Around his neck were linen bandages of the type used by the ancient Egyptians in wrapping mummies.

Windibank's is the third murder to be associated with the Mummy Katebet in the past six weeks. The archaeologist had accompanied the London University-sponsored expedition to Egypt.

The project has been cursed with ill luck since the first discovery of the tomb several months ago. Its organizer, Dr. Ebenizer Turnbull, was murdered in the actual tomb itself. Another archaeologist, Andrew Weatherby, met a similar fate on board the ship returning to England. The Jardine ship Eastern Empress was the scene of that mysterious death. The shipboard investigation was handled by Captain Herman Ramsey and his first officer, Luther Tenney.

Scotland Yard has declined to name any suspects at this time.

TO THE EDITOR
OF THE TIMES

Sir,- With regard to the recent Mummy Murders, I would like to suggest that we abandon our attempts to disturb the ancients, in their graves or otherwise. This applies not only to such excavations as have become so common in Egypt, Morocco and other foreign lands, but also to such projects in our own British Isles. If the hypotheses of such men as James Fergusson, who believes that Stonehenge is an ancient sepulchral monument of the Saxon Druids, are true, we should leave these burial grounds undisturbed. Surely if these murders are the work of some present-day mortal human, the police will discover his identity and bring him to justice. I do sincerely believe, however, we should not meddle in the magic and sorcery of which we know naught, for we have not the means to control the forces thus unleashed.

Respectfully yours, J.A. Smutts

TO THE EDITOR
OF THE TIMES

Sir, — The recent Mummy affair points up a fact I have been trying to convince my fellow Britishers of for quite some time; that is the phenomenal number of crimes, particularly those of a serious nature committed by foreigners. Shouldn't we act now to restrict access to our beloved isle before this tragedy becomes yet worse?

FATAL ACCIDENTS

A sad accident, which terminated fatally, occurred on Monday last to Mr. Francis Scott, of Farleigh Castle, Somerset, who while riding in his grounds was thrown from his horse, received a concussion of the brain, and died in a few hours. The Farleigh estates, which include the highly interesting ruins on the old castle, formerly the property of the Hungerford family, revert to his uncle, Sir Giles Scott, G.C. M.G., who was Chief Secretary to the Government of Malta from 1855 to 1883.

A Mr. James Johnston and his son, of the same name were on Wednesday afternoon engaged in laying the foundation of a headstone in a cemetery at Tollcross, near Glasgow, when the excavation, 14 ft. deep, fell in. The father was carried down with the falling soil and stone and completely buried. The son had a very narrow escape. Many villagers volunteered and attempted to recover the dead body, but it was so jammed that their efforts to extricate it were in vain.

TO THE EDITOR
OF THE TIMES

Sir, — As a man of science and medicine, I must protest these innuendos of murderous mummies. The ancient Egyptians had progressed far in their own investigations of life and science, but they had certainly not found the secret of everlasting life in the material world. Even had they, we cannot bring home the murder of two men to a 4000-year-old mummy. I can only repeat that this is utter nonsense and balderdash, without the slightest scientific basis, and a disgrace to the pages of your venerable newspaper.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

John H. Watson, M.D.
