FEMALE CLERKS IN THE
POST OFFICE

In answer to Mr. P. O'Brien

Mr. RICE said, it is a rule of the Post Office that any single woman holding an appointment on the establishment must resign on marriage. In October, 1888, there being reason to believe that Miss Gough had married, she was asked to state whether this was so or not, and on denying the fact she was requested to put her denial in writing. Her reply was to send in her resignation. I regret that it will not be possible to grant Miss Gough a pension. If other ladies formerly holding situations similar to hers are now married and yet in receipt of pensions, these pensions must have been granted before marriage and under medical certificate as prescribed by statute. Miss Gough, on the other hand, according to the certificate of the medical officer, who was intimately acquainted with her case, was before her marriage in good health.

DE KUYPER PAINTINGS
STOLEN FROM NATIONAL GALLERY

Police report that the National Gallery's two de Kuyper paintings were stolen last night. According to the guards on duty, the paintings were stolen shortly before midnight. Scotland Yard is investigating. Sir Simpson Witcomb, the Gallery's director, could not be reached for comment.

This burglary comes only days before the opening of a show bringing together all the known de Kuypers in the world. The paintings stolen, Summer Solstice and The Blue Unicorn, were the most recently discovered paintings by the 17th century student of Rubens. The National Gallery acquired them at auction last summer. That exhibition has been postponed temporarily.

CHANNEL COMMUNICATIONS

To the Editor of The Times

Sir, Your Paris Correspondent, in his letter on this subject which appeared in The Times of Monday last, speaks of the Channel Tunnel as costing only £16,000,000.

May I be permitted to say that this is an enormously excessive figure, the actual estimate before the directors for two single-line tunnels with the necessary works being £3,100,000.

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,

Collis Southwick, Secretary
Channel Tunnel Company (Limited)
London Bridge Station

SUBSIDENCE AT NORTHWICH

A serious subsidence occurred yesterday afternoon just outside Northwich on the Marton Road. The road has shown signs of giving way, and some seven or eight men with carts were filling it up with cinders. ## RUBENS' "CHAPEAU DE POIL"

To the Editor of The Times

Sir,— Lord Thurlow is correct with regard to the number of pictures by Rubens contained in the National Gallery, but I fear his knowledge of them is but slight, or he would not have attempted to correct your correspondent "H." and designate the celebrated portrait in the Peel Collection, as the Chapeau de Poil. H. was quite right when he spoke of the painting as Chapeau de Poil. The picture takes its name from the Spanish hat worn by the lady, which, it must be evident to every observer, is made of felt or beaver (poil), not of straw (paille). It is true that when the Tate Mr. Smith discovered this portrait, he called it (erroneously) the Chapeau de Paille.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

Everett Sedwick
21, King William Street, Jan. 20

AMERICAN MARKETS

New York, January 21

Corn opened slightly weaker, values being 1/4c. lower. Later in the day on "longs" realising, the market further declined, and, although there has been a good demand from exporters, the closing is weak, with values 1/4c. to 3/4c. lower.

Lard has improved in sympathy with Chicago, coupled with speculative purchases. The cash trade was light, but the closing is steady, with rates unchanged to 6 points up. Coffee opened with an upward tendency. March, May, and September deliveries being 5 to 10 points higher.

THE AMERICAN CYCLONES

Philadelphia, January 20

The mild weather which has been prevalent since Christmas was broken up yesterday by a "cold wave" from the west, which, as it progressed eastwards, produced cyclones accompanied by heavy rains, lightning, and hail, causing many disasters to life and property. The storm reached Pittsburgh at noon, and an unfinished building, as already reported, was brought to the ground, 15 persons being killed and 35 injured, while several others are missing. Towards evening the wave passed through the Alleghanies, working great damage at Harrisburg, York, Sunbury, Williamsport and Reading.

Several buildings collapsed in Reading, including a large silk mill. More than 100 people are thought dead with many more injured. Rescue parties continue labouring through the rubble of buildings.

The storm reached New York in the evening. Lightning fell in several places, blowing up two of the Brooklyn gas-tanks, and thus wrecking the adjacent houses and also part of the Navy-yard, the barracks being destroyed. The storm then proceeded out to sea, on which the high winds made a rough night. Everything is clear and serene today.

EGYPTIAN FINANCE

The championship of the world could not be decided, as Mr. Panschin, who won the first and second events, failed to secure the third.

GERMANY

Berlin, January 21

As is well known, the Empress Augusta has for many years past bestowed a diploma with her own signature and a gold cross on all female servants who have remained continuously in one family for 40 years. During the 11 years from January, 1879, to the close of last year, 1,535 servants received the cross and the diploma.

Count Benomar, last Spanish Ambassador at this Court, left Berlin last evening to the universal regret of the Diplomatic Corps here. The representatives of France, England, Austria, Brazil, Russia, Denmark and Portugal, with their staffs, were at the station to take their leave of the Count and the Countess. Sir Edward Malet presented the Countess with a handsome bouquet. The Emperor and the Empress, who had taken leave of Count and Countess Benomar at the Kaiserhof Hotel, were represented at their departure from Berlin by Lieutenant-General von Wittich and Major von Bulow. The Krevz Zeitung states that Belgium for the first time is about to be represented by a Military Attache there.
